

Method and circuit for sensing the output current of power sources

Abstract

Disclosed is a method for sensing the output current of a power source by averaging and summing instantaneous current signals generated by current sense devices installed in converters fed by the said power source.